Our counsellors provide women with confidential support and if needed can help them find appropriate local support options in their area. This new support service thus caters to a concrete social need and plays an important role in directing victims, relatives of victims, friends and professionals to appropriate support resources.

We will find answers together · free of charge · Confidentially · Round the clock

We can help you – quickly, safely and however you need us to

Why me? Maybe it's my own fault. How can I protect myself? What should I tell my children? And: Where can I find help? Questions like these cause a lot of emotional distress. And though you probably haven't asked anyone questions like these before, these are questions you need an answer to. Whether you are feeling scared, helpless, sad or even angry and full of rage, no matter what you feel and what questions are running through your mind: we are there at your side to provide advice and support. We want to give you someone to lean on – to let you know you are not alone. With the Violence against women support hotline we aim to give you a way of asking for help directly. Our counsellors (female) will make sure that you get the help you need, right away, any time of the day. You can put yourself in our hands.

Take the first step by calling us and we will simply listen to what you have to say. It is a central part of our philosophy that you decide how much you want to tell us and what you would prefer to keep to yourself. We always take you, your situation and your questions seriously. We will gladly offer to share with you our experience and our assessment of the situation. If you would like us to, we can help you find local support in your area.

What languages can I receive help in?

Even if you don't speak German or can't express yourself well enough in German, the Violence against women support hotline can provide you with support. Our counsellors can simply contact an interpreter so that you can ask all the questions you need without added stress and in the language you are most comfortable in. We provide telephone counselling in Turkish, Russian, French, English, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Polish, Serbo-Croatian, Greek, Bulgarian, Romanian, Arabic, Persian and Vietnamese as well.

What to do after Rape?

Police Emergency Services: 110

Information for the victims of sexual offences:

If someone sexually assaults you then you will feel bad. You will probably feel dirty and disgusted. Before you change your clothes or have a shower you should go to the hospital.

There are usually no witnesses of rape or sexual abuse. Therefore it is important to collect forensic evidence in order to be able to prosecute the offender at a later point in time.

Maybe a trusted person can accompany you to the hospital. This will most likely make it a little easier for you.

After such an offense one enters a psychological state similar to shock. Most people affected are usually disorientated for some time. They try to understand what has happened and try to regain control of their lives.

Whether you want to press charges or not we highly recommend that you have physical evidence recovered as soon as possible.

Emotions

Being blamed can cause shame, fear and a sense of self worthlessness. All these feelings are normal emotions, therefore it is strongly advised to seek professional help through an outreach clinic or a psychologist.

It is often difficult to talk about the events with friends and family. There are people who are trained to know about the mental and emotional consequences of sexual offenses. They are confidential (you should ask about this first), are happy to listen to you and together you can think of what you can do to help you get better despite what has happened.

Professional help can be beneficial in order to reach an appropriate decision.

Offer:

The only nationwide aid organisation for victims of crime and their families. The White Ring is a nationwide aid organisation for crime victims. The aid offers from this charitable organisation are diverse and are adapted to the personal situation of the victim in each specific case. The volunteers are usually the first people who take care of the crime victims and with whom the affected people can talk about their problems to. A phone call, a visit in hospital, support with dealing with the authorities- simply the feeling what the victim is not „forgotten“ can help the person to have new courage and hope. Someone who becomes a crime victim suddenly faces previously small issues in everyday life that are now huge. Here the staff of the White Ring give fast and non-bureaucratic help when it is needed most. Often the first consultation at a law firm is financed. The White Ring publicly supports the interests of the affected people and supports preventive measures.

Victims of crime find help

The WEISSER RING has been caring for the victims of crime, their relatives and surviving dependents for more than 30 years. It supports the idea of crime prevention and stands up publicly and persistently for the interests of injured parties. The WEISSER RING'S work for victims knows no nationality boundaries.

Anyone who becomes the victim of a criminal offence is as a rule only inadequately informed about their statutory rights and claims. The WHITE RING sets a good example here.

With information on help for the victims of crime and important rights for the protection of victims in the most common languages, we would like to help the people affected living here to cope better with the consequences of the crime suffered.

Nationwide hotline for victims: 116 006

How the WEISSER RING helps

At 420 branch offices nationwide, more than 3,000 voluntary helpers give victims the feeling that they have not been forgotten.

This includes human assistance, accompanying victims to hearings at the police, public prosecutor's office and the court, providing help in dealing with other public authorities, advisory checks for first consultations with lawyers and psychotraumatologists, the granting of legal protection as well as financial support in the case of distressed circumstances as a result of the crime. All the Association's help for victims is free of charge.

Foreign citizens, who become victims of intentional acts of violence in Germany and whose health suffers as a result, can receive state benefits in accordance with the Crime Victims Compensation Act on application.

Detailed information on important victims' rights is ready on call in the Internet in various languages www.weisser-ring.de.

in which a woman is in control of her own life, regardless of her individual background. We envision...

- a future in which no woman will be born as an unwanted child, but as a baby girl who can grow up freely and happily and without fear of getting hurt or killed based on her sex at any point in her life.
- a gender equal society in which young girls and boys share the same access to education, freedom of dress, and choice in leisure activities.
- a world in which a young woman can freely choose her political views, religious beliefs and practices, professional career, and partner. This world is based on equal pay and socio-economic independence.
- a partnership the form of which a woman can define freely with her partner or spouse and in which conflicts are solved without violence.
- a pregnancy and motherhood during which a mother and her family feel safe at all times regarding their physical and socio-economic well-being.
- twilight years during which a woman may grow old with dignity and respect.

Offer:

Support for women in need – the Violence against women support hotline.

Available round the clock, 365 days a year and free of charge: the Violence against women support hotline offers victims a way of receiving competent advice securely, anonymously and regardless of disability whenever they need. Our counsellors provide women with confidential support and if needed can help them find appropriate local support options in their area. This new support service thus caters to a concrete social need and plays an important role in directing victims, relatives of victims, friends and professionals to appropriate support resources.

A service that is needed

Representative studies commissioned by the German Federal Office for Family, Senior, Women's and Youth Affairs (BMFSFJ) have made the situation clear: there is a high frequency of women becoming the victims of gender-specific violence in Germany. One out of every two disabled women has been the victim of sexual assault. A wide and varied network of support options for those affected already exists at the city and community level, but until recently a central 24-hour hotline to provide all those needing support with information anonymously, free of charge and regardless of disability, and direct them to appropriate local agencies was lacking. The Violence against women support hotline was created to fill this gap in the support network.

Highly qualified and secure counselling – in many languages and regardless of disability

Our counsellors are all female and all highly qualified. The counselling they provide is always anonymous, confidential and takes into account all data protection requirements. Thanks to special programming, visiting the support hotline's website is also highly secure. By providing round-the-clock availability, high security standards, counselling available in many languages as well as regardless of disability, we aim to empower women affected by violence to use the support hotline as a resource. We wish to achieve this in particular for those sections of the population which have until now only seldom made use of the existing support resources. We hope to in this way be able to reach immigrants, women with disabilities, older women or victims of human trafficking.

In case you need the morning after pill in Germany, you need a prescription from a doctor. You can go to a gynaecologist to get a prescription without having an appointment. In case the doctor is closed you can go to a hospital and ask for the morning after pill and they will help you, or you can go to each other doctor (only at the weekend when a gynaecologist is closed!) and ask for a prescription.

In America the morning after pill is known as “Plan B”!

When to use “The morning after pill”?

Emergency contraception is a safe and effective way to prevent pregnancy after unprotected intercourse.

You may want to use it if:

- you weren't using any birth control when you had sex
- you forgot to take your birth control pills, patch, ring, or other birth control method
- your partner's condom broke or slipped off
- your partner didn't pull out in time or
- you were forced to have unprotected vaginal sex.

How does it work?

Emergency contraception pills work by keeping a woman's ovary from releasing an egg for longer than usual. Take it as soon as possible (!).

How do I get it?

Because brands of emergency contraception require a prescription from a doctor.

1. Make an appointment with a doctor
(In the weekend call: emergency services)
2. Get a prescription from the doctor
3. Go to the pharmacy and get the “morning after pill”.
(If you are older than 21, you have to pay the pill on your own.)

Another possibility to get the pill is to buy it in the Netherlands without a prescription at a pharmacy.

In NL you always have to pay it on your own.

Since emergency contraception works better the sooner you take it, it's a good idea to get emergency contraception before you need it just in case.

That way you'll have it on hand if an accident happens, and you won't have to worry about running out to a pharmacy or waiting to get an appointment for a prescription.

13. Applying for a Visa

Visa for study purposes

You would like to take up a course of studies in the Federal Republic of Germany - e.g. at the Rhine-Waal University of Applied Sciences in Kleve? Then you will possibly need a visa to enter the country!

Visa-free entry

Citizens of Switzerland, Andorra, Australia, Brazil, El Salvador, Honduras, Israel, Japan, Canada, Monaco, New Zealand, Republic of Korea, San Marino and the USA may enter the country visa-free for study purposes. They will have to apply for a residence permit within three months after entering the country. You can find detailed information for further steps after your entry under “residence permit for study purposes”.

Citizens of the EU member states enjoy freedom of movement and may also enter the country visa-free. You can find detailed information for further steps after your entry under “residence permit for study purposes”.

Visa requirements

All citizens of other countries need a visa to enter the country for study purposes. As soon as you have received your admission to studies, you may apply for a visa to enter Germany at the German Embassy / Consulate that is responsible for you. The same applies to applicants for a university place as well as persons interested in pre-study language courses. There are two types of visa that are suitable for study purposes:

- Visa for prospective foreign students

A visa for prospective foreign students is intended to enable prospective foreign students to acquire information concerning the studies or to fulfil the required qualifications for an application. After the admission has been obtained, the visa can be changed by the Aliens Registration Office into a “residence permit for study purposes”.

- Student visa

The student visa is issued to foreign students who can already present the admission to a German university, study college or supporter of preparatory language courses. It can be changed into a “residence permit for study purposes”.

Please remember to apply for your visa in good time before you enter the country (at least 2 months in advance).

You should under no circumstances enter Germany with a visa for tourists or visitors! These visas cannot be changed into “residence permits for study purposes”; in this case you will have to return to your home country where you will have to apply for the required visa. The same applies to a so-called language course visa.

You can find information concerning the required documents for an application for a visa for study purposes on the internet pages of the Federal Foreign Office, the German missions abroad and the German Academic Exchange Service. Links to the respective pages can be found at the end of this page.

You can find more information about the further procedure after your entry under „residence permit for study purposes”.

Residence permit for study purposes

The presence in the Federal Republic of Germany for study purposes is directed by the Residence Laws and/or the Rights of Free Movement/EU.

You are a citizen of a member state of the EU?

Then you will enjoy the right of free movement and you may enter the country without being required to have a visa.

You are a citizen of another foreign country?

Then you will need a residence permit for study purposes. You should by all means apply for it before your entrance visa expires and/or within three months after your visa-free entrance and after your registration with the local authorities at your residence.

Please present the following documents for this purpose:

- Completed application form
- Valid passport (or identity card for citizens of EU member states)
- 2 passport photographs that are suitable for biometry
- Original rental agreement and/or other suitable proof of accommodation
- Admission notice / certificate of matriculation of university/study college/supporter of preparatory language courses
- Proof of health insurance
- Proof of secure means of subsistence
- Cash for administrative fee

Please see to the extension of your residence permit in due time in order to avoid problems!
